Don't Hate the Sky

August 7 – October 3, 2016

Opening: Sunday August 7, 4–7PM

Open to visitors: 8AM–8PM daily

“When I think about Thomas Kong’s work I am struck by the persistent use of cardboard as a default component of his collages. Its use is tied to its availability—which also allows it to be forgotten.

What cannot be overlooked is the unorthodox back room of Kim’s Corner Food. Its white washed stalls force an altar-like read of artworks installed therein.

For this exhibition the walls of The Back Room will serve as my cardboard. The installation speaks to a point where Thomas's and my work intersect: in a shared fascination with the graphic and the poetic possibilities of signs.”
